Nuzzle

A breastfeeding tracker that feels like a dim, gentle night light. Deep plum, soft rose and peach, rounded type, and one calm ring that answers the main question at a glance: which side, and how long since the last feed.

Principles

Half asleep, one hand

Every screen works at 3am with one thumb. Big targets (56pt minimum), nothing important at the top, the two side buttons never move.

Calm, never alarming

Nothing glows white, nothing is red, nothing moves unless something changed. Reminders are gentle; quiet hours arrive without sound.

Left is rose, Right is peach

Each side keeps its colour on every screen: buttons, ring, chips, charts. She can tell them apart without reading.

Kind, plain words

Short sentences, no exclamation marks, no dashes, no advice. "Baby" until she types a name.

Components

Ring at rest

Ring while feeding

Side buttons

Main button

Neutral lilac, never a side colour, so it is never mistaken for Left or Right. 64 tall, full width.

Choice

History chips

Space and shape

Spacing steps

Screen side margin 20. Minimum tap target 56.

Corners

Motion and voice

Motion

150 to 250 ms, gentle springs, only to show what changed. Reduce Motion turns it into fades. A soft haptic tick on start, switch, pause and stop.

Words

- "Started on the left." not "Feed started successfully!"
- "Past your 2h window" not "Overdue"
- "These are examples, not advice."

No exclamation marks, no hyphens or dashes, no medical advice.
